dance he characterized as morally wrong.

Dancing is wholly a moral question. Music and motion do not make that thing right morally which is otherwise wrong, but the round dance is a social amusement which has filtered into vogue and has been accepted by modest, refined, delicate and sweet women as right for them to indulge in. And this is the thing that is taught in connection with social settlement work and clubs for men and women as wholesome and moral. It is improper and immodest for any gentleman or woman who would conform to the highest standards of ethics and refinement in our intersocial relations. No man under any circumstances at any time or any place has any right to take any liberties—with a woman's person, but the round dance has been permitted to work its way into society to the demoralization of modesty and that indescribable something which makes at that is sweetest in woman. What law of ethics permits me, because the music is playing and I'm keeping step with her, to do trut which she would not permit at any other time? (Applause.)

But the excuse will be presented other time? (Applause.)

which she would not permit at any other time? (Applause.)

But the excuse will be presented that it is impossible to dance perfectly otherwise. It is no question of how far around a woman's beit line the arm is placed, but when such contact is permitted by me nand women as is required by the modern round dance, you have clearly put people in places where they are bound to be tempted. I needn't say more than that to an intelligent audience.

Dr. Stough also denounced dance halls as the recruiting places for the white slave traffic, and stated that only on Tuesday night the police of this city had been on the trail of two men who had a plan all laid to take two girls out of this city and debauch them. He also said that all statistics proved that dancing produced more fallen women than all other causes put together, and in conclusion asked his audience to remember that he was not saying that all who dance had impure thoughts, but to turn these things over in their minds and see if there was not a grain of truth in what he had said. there was not a grain of truth in what Maennerchor Wins Pinochle Tournament with Schuetzen Verein-Large Attendance at Funeral of Mrs. Henry Depathy.

The Maennerchor won the deciding match in the pinochle tournament with the Schuetzen Verein Tuesday evening in the latter club's hall in Lisbon. There was a large attendance to see the experts play, but the home team lost by 120 points to the Maen-nerchor, thus taking three out of the four matches played and winning the trophy, a handsome stein and a set of cups, for the present year. To set of cups, for the present year. To permanently retain the trophy, the Maennerchor must win at pinochie for two more years, and so, although defeated at the beginning, the members of the Schuetzen Verein have not yet given up the hope of adding this coveted prize to their collection. The tournament just closed probably sets a record for closeness in local contests for in total points scored the Maennerchor is but 70 in the lead. The Maennerchor players won the first two matches and the third was won by the Schuetzen Verein. The outcome of the tournament has been watched with great interest by the supporters of the two rival but friendly teams.
